By Bernard Gwertzman New York Times Service

RIYADH -- Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig's plans for building "a strategic consensus" in the Middle East against the Soviet Union suffered a setback Tuesday when Jordan said that Israel was responsible for the turmoil and instability in the region.

After private talks with Mr.

Israeli Opposition

The sale of the surveillance aircraft has generated opposition in Israel. U.S. officials have tried to soften the impact by telling the Israclis that the planes will not be delivered until 1985, that until then the four planes already in Saudi Arabia will continue to be operated by U.S. Air Force personnel and that after 1985 it is conceivable that the Saudis might agree to an arrangement by which the United States continues to op-

Mr. Brezhnev accused the West of claiming the right to give orders everywhere "while requiring us to give up the vital interests of our own security and the granting of aid to our friends when they are exposed to aggression or to the threat of attack."

That was taken as a rejoinder to a statement by U.S. Defense Secre-tary Caspar W. Weinberger that there could be no renewed disar-mament talks if Soviet tanks moved into Poland.

U.S. Still Concerned About Soviet Activity

From Agency Dispatches
WASHINGTON — The United States is still seriously concerned about Soviet military activity in and around Poland and by the threatening attitude adopted by the Soviet Union and other East European countries, the State Department said Tuesday.

Commenting on Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's speech to the Czecboslovak Communist Party Congress in Prague, in which he appeared to be easing Soviet pressure on Poland, State Department spokesman William J. Dyess said that the Soviet leader's remarks did not give a clear picture of Soviet intentions.

More Time

Mr. Dyess said that the department had not yet bad time to study the text of the speech adequately but "if he meant to say that the Poles should be allowed to solve their own problems without outside interference, we would welcome this. At the same time, we continue to be seriously concerned about the Soviet military activity in and around Poland, and the threatening public posture taken by the Soviets and by other East European countries.

Mr. Dyess refused to comment on reports from East European countries that Warsaw Paet countries bad finished military maneuvers in the region.

U.S. intelligence sources said that, while they had seen signs of Warsaw Pact units pulling back. new Soviet combat elements put into Poland during the last week or so would make it easier for the Soviet Union to intervene if it decided to do so.

At his daily press briefing on Monday, Mr. Dyess said that the administration was reviewing and discussing a broad range of political. diplomatie and economie steps that could be taken if the Soviet Union intervened. But he said: "There is no evidence that a decision to intervene in Poland has been made."

language followed warnings late last week that Soviet intervention in Poland might be imminent. Sec-retary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. delayed his 10-day trip to the Middle East for more than an hour last Friday while the National Security Council weighed reports that the Soviet Union had begun airlifting belicopters into Legnica, the Soviet military district headquarters in southwest Poland, in an action that appeared to be conducted on a small scale to avoid attracting attention and generating alarm in Poland.

A State Department official attributed the softening of the warnings this week to two factors: a lack of military actions by the Russians that would normally precede intervention and Mr. Brezhnev's presence in Prague for the 16th Czechoslovak Communist Party Congress, which opened Monday.

"Do you think that they would really start something while Brezhnev was oul of the country?" a State Department official asked France, which is the largest coal importer in Western Europe and second only to Japan worldwide, substantially boosted its U.S. purchases before the strike began. But the combination of dwin-

After Meeting With Haig pleased by Mr. Haig's rejection of other Israeli-supported efforts to use a U.S. presence in the Sinai detachment as a "spearhead" for a "disguised" equivalent of the Rapid Deployment Force to protect the Gulf oil installations. By Jonathan C. Randal

Washington Post Service

CAIRO - President Anwar Sadat came away from his first meeting with Secretary of State Alexan-der M. Haig Jr. satisfied and delighted that the Reagan administration has dropped Israeli-sponsored schemes politically unacceptable to Egypt, according to high Egyptian sources. Although key issues remain unresolved, the sources made clear Monday their relief that Mr. Haig understood Egypt's earlier concern that the administration appeared influenced by Israeli thinking on issues as varied as downgrading the Palestinian problem in favor of an anti-Soviet crusade to hilateral U.S.-Egyptian issues.

The sources close to Mr. Sadat were pleased that the United States no longer was toying with apparently Israeli-sponsored ideas on the multinational peacekeeping force in the Sinai peninsula.

Similarly, the United States had avoided trying to persuade Egypt to accept written assurances about the Red Sea air and naval installations at Ras Banas for which Congress has been asked to appropri-ate $106 million.

'In Touch' "The Americans know we cannot give them a base or a base dis-guised as facilities," the sources said in noting that both sides had agreed only to remain "in touch" on this issue. The sources specifically were pleased that Mr. Haig had failed to raise the possible use by U.S. forces of two Israeli-built air bases located in the last part of the Sinai peninsula which the Jewish state is scheduled to evacuate by April,

Israel is credited with having suggested to the Resean adminis-tration that U.S. use of Fitam in the north and Erzion in the south would reassure Israeli public opin-ion about security in the demilitarized border zone to be patrolled by a multinational force. The sources also stressed that Egypt remained opposed to the Is-raeli-backed inclusion of 1,000 U.S. troops in that force on grounds that their presence would justify charges of superpower in-terference in Egypt both in Egyp-tian and regional public opinion.

The United States and Egypt de-cided Sunday to defer any conclu-sion on that score, although the sources stressed that they still felt any U.S. role should be limited to

Sadat Reported Pleased

Also laid to rest were earlier suggestions that the United States was seeking to use Sharm-cl-Sheikh, near the southern tip of the Sinai peninsula, as a base for the Rapid Deployment Force.

The sources noted that the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty expressly forbade Sharm-el-Sheikh's scrying for any but purely civilian

Weinberger Meets Allies

(Continued from Page 1) defense, did not go beyond re-iterating U.S. support in principle for arms control talks. According to U.S. sources, he indicated that it "will take a while" for the Reagan administration to complete its studies and preparations. The European members of the alliance would like more visible action out of Washington. Several European governments have been telling the Reagan administration that it will be difficult to sell public opinion on the new weapons deployment — which needs parliamentary approvals — unless sums talks start fairly soon.

Mr. Weinberger, in a general address to the meeting, stressed to the Europeans that the administration was making deep cuts in so-cial programs while expanding military spending by 4 percent in 1981 over the Carter administration's budget, and another 15 percent in the 1982 budget.
But he added that "the American people will not want to march alone if its efforts are not joined by those who face a common danger. Mr. Weinberger also dealt bluntly with the latest strategic arms treaty, SALT-2, which, he said, the administration had abandoned because it was inequitable, provided no real constraints to maintain the strategic balance, and could not be suitably verified:

The secretary presented charts on Kremlin defense spending in showed that the Soviet Union was outspending the United States by 2-1 on strategic systems in 1970 and is now outspending Washing-ten by 2-1.

SAN SALVADOR - Two carloads of men in uniforms and civilian clothes drove into a poor capi-tal suburb early Tuesday, pulled 23 persons from their homes and shot them on the streets while seven others were slain in their bomes,

When reporters arrived in the suburb of Monte Carmelos, east of town, they counted 23 bodies. Two homes were burned, apparently by fires started by bazooka rounds. "It was borrible ... Undescribable," said a woman who lived in

TWA doubles its size at JFK to make flying easier.

One thing a space-age airline terminal should give you is plenty of space.

That's why TWA has acquired the terminal adjacent to our existing terminal at JFK. We're combining these two buildings into the largest and most spacious flight centre at JFK.

Separate international and domestic buildings

Our existing terminal used to handle all TWA traffic, domestic and international. Now it will handle international traffic only. Our new building will handle all the TWA domestic flights with connections to more than 50 cities throughout the US.

The two terminals are connected by a short walkway, making it easy to transfer from one to the other.

Bigger flight centre means better service

The amount of traffic that used to go through one terminal now goes through two. The result will be less congestion, smaller crowds shorter queues. It'll mean less

The gate areas will be less crowded too. And less crowding means better service.

Pushing the Auto Industry

auto industry relief plan does oot explicitly call for Japan to restrain auto exports to the United States. The anti-protectionist approach is to be applauded. But not too loudly, because at the same time, a team from the Special Trade Representative's office is in Tokyo on a "delicate" mission. The assignment is to bring back an agreement on a voluntary quota without asking for it. If that sounds like sleight-of-hand, it's because it is. The president, quite uoderstandably from a political point of view, is trying to preserve his credentials as a free-trader and keep his campaign promise to U.S. auto workers to put some life back in the industry.

The Japanese would like to help President Reagan out of his dilemma, but in a way that is consistent with their own interests. Japanese automakers can afford to sell fewer cars on the U.S. market, but such U.S.-Japanese collusion in restraint of trade would upset Europeans, most of whom already impose some restrictions on Japanese auto exports. Lord Carrington, the British foreign minister, told the Japanese this week that "it is not acceptable that the American problem be solved and the European problem be put to one side." The Japanese do not want to be forced into further limiting their European sales just because Detroit is in trouble. And they are disappointed that the administration package did not include wage controls and investment incentives to quicken the pace of the U.S. auto industry's recovery.

The bulk of the Reagan program is the rollback and relaxation of pollution and safety standards. Some of them make sense. It is not necessary, for example, that all U.S. cars

It is good that the Reagan administration's be pollutioo-free above 5,000 feet. A limited oumber of cars could be equipped to serve that market. But it does not make sense to halve the crash standard for bumpers from five miles an hour to two and a half miles an hour or to remove tire safety restrictions. There are more than 30 other regulations that the administration is seeking to have postponed or eliminated.

> Vice President Bush said that easing the clean air and safety restrictions on the industry would save the consumer $9.3 hillion and the auto manufacturers. $1.4 billion. He also said it would permit 200,000 unemployed auto workers to return to their jobs. If all of his figures were to prove accurate, it would be a trade-off worth examining carefully. But they are probably all over-optimistic, in part because they depend on the willingness of the Big Three automakers to pass through savings to the consumer. They also depend on the administration being right about the extent to which its overall program will stimulate the economy.

> Detroit is generally pleased about the plan. Japan is less so. But neither has as its first concern the welfare of the U.S. public. That is the government's responsibility. It remains to he seen whether the Reagan approach to protecting the public interest is the right one. It is a short-term effort aimed at getting the industry over the $70 billion retooling hump it now faces. What the cost will be in pollution and safety hazards is incalculable. It is also hard to say what the long-term consequences will be. After all, the government can't hold the industry's hand forever.

Bargaining With Saudis

By persuading President Sadat to let 1,000 U.S. troops join a peacekeeping force in the Sinai Peninsula. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has assured the survival of the Camp David accords and reaffirmed U.S. sponsorship of the Israeli-Egyptian entente. Thus he reached Saudi Arabia on Tuesday as a protector of Israel as well as a suitor for oil. It is time to insist that the Saudis end their scornful treatment of Camp David as part of a wider diplomatic bargain that justifies their purchase of ever more sophisticated U.S.

.The Saudis contend that their growing economic and military ties to the United States represent only an anti-Soviet alignment. But in making their air force dependent upon U.S. supplies and training, they are in fact contributing to U.S. influence in the region and thus to the security of Egypt and Israel. The soooer they own up to that reality, and drop even the pretense of a "holy war" against Israel, the smoother will be their U.S. connection. It is hard to believe that the Saudis' diplomatic doubletalk still fools any Palestinians, thus protecting the House of Saud against subversion or revolt. Indeed, if the Saudi monarchy cannot survive open accommodation with Israel, it is hardly a safe depository for all that dangerous bardware.

A few honest words from the Saudis would certainly improve the Reagan administration's case for the proposed arms sales. Mr. Haig's explanations so far have been extremely vague. His expressed regard for President Carter's "commitments" would be touching if he had not enthusiastically kicked over so many other diplomatic traces.

The fact is that he, too, is eager to give the Saudis almost anything they want - missiles and fuel tanks to extend the reach of the promised F-15 fighters and now the AWACS electronic surveillance aircraft that can spy over the entire region. He wants Congress to approve these sales for the boods they may create with the Saudi military and for the basing rights that may evolve for U.S. forces.

What Congress should also want in return is a Saudi diplomacy that legitimizes Arab negotiation with Israel. The Saudis should be encouraged to continue to mediate regional disputes, as in their defense of Jordan against Syria last year. They have a role in the effort to restore effective government in Lebanon. And they need to contribute more to international aid programs that help poor nations struggling to pay for oil.

The Israelis resent the buildup of Saudi power, but not because they cannot defend against it. What frightens them most is the Western rush to appease the Saudis' oil wealth. An Israel afraid of diplomatic isolation will not in the end negotiate generously with even the most moderate Arabs. If Mr. Haig aims to contain Soviet influence in the Middle East, he needs allies who will at least speak to each other.

Next, the Ox Cart

No one has taken the dirigible seriously for decades - except the military during World War II and, more recently, the television companies during big-time, outdoor sports events. But dirigibles may now be on their way back.

The Goodyear Aerospace Co., according to a recent report in The New York Times. has spent $7 million in the last seven years on airship design and marketing studies. It is now looking for customers for two versions of the blimps it sends around the country regularly on public-relations missions.

One of those versions is pretty conventional. About half the size of the airships that hover over football stadiums, it is designed to be a maritime surveillance craft that stays on patrol for 48 hours while serving as a platform for visual and radar operations. The Coast Guard is said to be interested.

The other version is the one that catches the fancy. More than 450 feet long, with helicopter hlades to help it up and down and propellers to move it forward and backward. this blimp is designed to move freight. Goodyear thinks it can lift 75 tons and carry them up to 300 miles at 75 mph. Heavy-duty helicopters, with which it would compete, handle about 16 tons and have quite limited range. Goodyear is said to be talking about building one of these blimps to haul tar sand out of inaccessible areas of Canada.

And why not? Mankind dreamed of harnessing the balloon long before Orville and Wilbur Wright put their plane into the air at Kitty Hawk. And the zeppelins, until disaster struck, seemed to have a great future. Now, with helium instead of hydrogen inside the airhags and with the price of oil increasing the operating costs of airplanes and helicopters, maybe the day of the dirigible has come at last. If it has, who knows what will come next? Maybe the ox cart.

Terrorist Actions: From these and a dozen other examples 1 conclude our crisis, so sorely in need of a manager, has to do with the art and act of knowing. My friend Claire Sterling has written a book called "The Terror Network" io which she cites certain authoritative, uncontradicted and publicly available material showing the fact of Soviet sympathy with, and even encouragement and direction of. some of the bloodiest terrorist actions of the past decade. The response has been predictably extreme. Some have pushed her evidence to places the book itself doesn't pretend to take it. Others, either in reaction to this or in undying loyalty to their own prejudices, have simply denied all ele-ments of her story: It is a hysterical Red-baiting invention, there is no KGB-Carlos connection, and

Another book has recently dealt with this subject of "knowing" in a stunning, important and, I think, endlessly relevant way. It is Walter Laqueur's "The Terrible Secret," a brief but heavily documented account of what really was and wasn't known or available to be known about the Nazis' extermination of the Jews in Europe while that extermination was place and in light of the almost universal failure to react to it at ally accurate whole. Those alarm the time. Mr. Laqueur shows how a veritable avalanche of information was accessible to all, public, explicit, io print - there - and yet how in some particular way it was

Why? What were and are the mechanisms that determine this strange human propensity? One eledging a reality may imply or require some response that is inconvenient or risky or costly. It is surely easier to deny, let us say, the political genealogy of some of the terrorists or the existence of poor people imperiled by some program cut that it is to do something about them. Knowing may presuppose acting. Mr. Laqueur shows how this anxiety motivated much Allied behavior in relation to the dying Jews in World War II.

Denial

Sometimes the instrument of denial is mere skepticism based upon certain precedents. The remembrance of extravagant and fake propaganda about German attroci-nes in World War I evidently fed the incredulity with which people met the news of highly organized geoocide in 1942. The extremes of earlier Red scares in the United States, though admittedly of a dra-matically lesser human importance than the genocide, similarly cootribute now to the skepticism with which information coocerning Soviet conduct is greeted.

But the buman mind is notably fertile and inventive, with or without such precedents, in the manu-facture of reasons to disbelieve various facts and in the creation of techniques for achieving this dis-belief. There is the match-up of evils: They do this but we have done that, so it is all canceled out. There is the exploitation of exceptions or of the predictable fact that oo situation is 100 percent a cer-tain way. Some of the poor cheat on their welfare. Some of your best anti-Communist allies are oo particular lilies themselves. There are the occasional errors of fact or presentation mixed into the genercriers who were more right than about the death camps saw their message widely disregarded on the basis of what you could call saving flaws, eagerly seized upon by peo-ple who didn't want to know.

Tricky Part

Buried Accounts: Great amounts of all the things we don't know are written about in papers. This too happened in the early 1940s. And here we come to an especially tricky part, how it is played seems to make it more or less true and thus more or less important. The New York Times, according to Mr. Laqueur, buried an early account of the mass killings, thereby suggesting it didn't quite believe the story itself. Journalists who are regularly chastised for cheapening and overplaying news when they are attentive are nonetheless more often chastised for not making enough of what they

Atlanta is an example. It is argued hy many people that the placement and size of the Atlanta story were too modest for its content and have betrayed the mdifference to black suffering of a white community and press. The theory is that knowledge is somebow certified as real and validated as important only when it dominates the news. . -

Being Used

The U.S. press, which properly has an obsession about being used remains quite naive and trusting about the ways to believe that m we have tracked a memo to and across someone's desk we have established that he knew some-thing. And we correctes make much in the dislodging of guarded information of what we call the people's "right to know."

Reading Mr. Laqueur and hearing the arguments that fill the political air this spring. I observe that perhaps a more important element in public understanding is the desire and will - or lack of both -

The role of the West in all this ... while not central, is more than tha of helpless bystander. The United States and its allies will determine in large part the price the Sovie. It gives the Russians at least the color of a pretext for not showing restraint. Indeed, if the idea is to make the Russians invade. Chinis a good subject to raise.

Secondly, there was the reluc-tance of the West German foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher to press the Polish question during a visit to Moscow last week, Mr. zhnev and other high Soviet officials about theater nuclear weap ons in Europe. But he didn't force the Polish issue, because the Russians showed sensitivity. Which, in fact, is exactly the reason to come across fond and clear on the sub

The mood in Washington, however, does not exactly favor share concentration on Poland. The White House emphasis is on reas-suring the country that President Reagan is alive and well and telling more jokes than ever. Even though Mr. Nyerere is still very popular, them is increasing grumbling against his Socialist polcies, which some people blame for many of the country's ills.

Mr. Nyerere is Africa's most prominent proponent of nonalignment. He has already criticized the U.S. military buildup in the Indian Ocean and is bound to increase the criticism if the Reagan administraton continues to relax U.S. opposition to white-ruled South Africa.

U.S. proposals to slow down $3 billion in grants to the World Bank'a loan program could also seriously affect Tanzania, which last year received $125 million from that source.

Message to Businesswen

Mr. Hamid's message to businessmen and bureaucrats traveling to the Middle East is that peace and oil supplies are inextricably entangled and that to get along with the Arab countries they must take a favorable attitude toward the PLO.

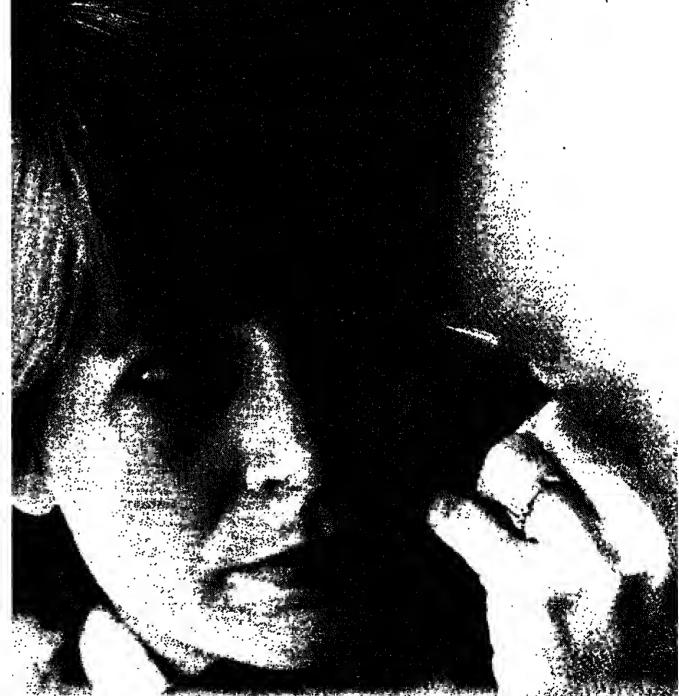

That message is also made clear to the Japanese government by leaders of the oil-rich nations, he said. As an example, Mr. Hamid cited the visit to Japan in November, 1979, of Mana Said al-Oteiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, who had earlier opened negotiations with Japan on the PLO's behalf.

Oteiba told them that you cannot speak about guarantees of oil and supplies of oil without looking to our political interests, which is the Palestinian question," Mr.

Hamid said. That meeting with Mr. Oteiba, Mr. Hamid asserted, ended with a promise by Japan to arrange audiences for Mr. Arafat with the premier and foreign minister.

Makarova Teams With Roland Petit

By David Stevens

mal Horald Tribur:e DARIS - Roland Petit and his Ballet National de Marseille have moved into the Theatre Musical de Paris for the month, starting out with a program made up of revivals of "Carmen" and "L'Arlesienne" and a new set of dances in music by Chabrier.

In recent years, Sovict-trained dancers bave either given a new lease on life to nld Petit ballets (Baryshnikov in "Le jeune homme et la mort") or inspired new ones (Plisetskaya in "La Rose malade"), and oow Natalia Makarova has joined the list in put her own brilliant stamp on "Carmeo" — first

At first glance, Makarova (who is alternating in the role with Dominique Khalfouni) hardly seems the type, with her short bloud hair, to be persuasive as the smoldering gypsy of Merimee and Bizet. That impressing does not last long, however, as Makarova brings her formidable classical technique and powerfully concentrated temperament to bear on the role. In particular, the bedroom scene with Don Jose (well danced by Denys Ganio) has a steamy eroticism conveyed entirely in dance terms. Io any case, Makarova's per-

"L'Arlesienne," which dates from 1974, also uses Bizet's music and the Daudet story for which it was composed of the young man whose infatuation for a woman of Arles drives him to suicide on the eve of his wedding to another. Jean-Charles Gil, as Frederi, bas to carry a heavy dramatic load because the title part of the femme fatale exists only in his head. This he does brilliantly, aided by choreography by Petit that effectively contrasts group scenes of ritual solemnity with dramatic duos and

The best thing about the cur-tain-raiser of six Chabrier dances is the chance to hear this music short orchestral pieces and transcriptions of piano pieces — by a composer too little bonored in the concert hall. The mercurial charm and vivid colors of Chabrier's music is nnt always matched in Petit's abstract choreography, which is agreeable but does not sustain an equal level of invention. But there is a splashy dun in "Habanera" and Jean-Charles Gil made the most of sparkling solo in "Bourree Fantasque." The Colonne Orchestra under Karolos Trikolidis gave a lively account of the music.

This program, with alternate casts, runs through April 18, to be followed by a revival of Petit's fullength "Nutcracker."

'Elephant Man' Flawlessly Evokes a Macabre Life

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS - Tastes differ and there must be many who find "Elent Man" - in acting, concept and buman appeal - superior to "Ordinary People," which the Oscar electors, voting the straight Hollywood ticket, last week declared the best film of the year.

Produced by the Mel Brooks production company, "Elephant Man" retelis the true and ghastly story of a wretched semiparalytic, monstrously deformed in face and figure, whn was a sideshow attraction in the Londoo suburbs during the late 19th century. He was rescued from this abysmal servitude by a bumane pathologist and installed for examination in a clinic.

His pitiful cooditing was incurable, but through kindly care be recovered his speech to disclose an intelligence of remarkable caliber. Reports of the strange case spread and members of Queen Victoria's court visited him and the great actress Madge Kendall taught him poetry and invited him to her theater. His former exploiter kid-napped him and whisked him to the Continent to again be exhibited as a freak, but he escaped and made his way back to London to die peacefully in the hospital room he bad been granted.

The screenplay is based on records and memoirs of the period and not on the recent play of like title and subject.

It has passages of terror, shock and suspense, several of them of gripping strength. The makeup worn by John Hurt as the man of twisted head and features is probably the most hideously startling since Lon Chaney was unmasked as the opera phantom. The crucity of mnb curiosity is illustrated with unblinking realism and the sinister scenes of the shadowy quarters of the Victorian underworld are so persuasive that one expects Jack the Ripper to leap from behind a lamp post. The macabre back-ground mood is flawlessly evoked. It is not, however, the perfection of period production that sets this film above its rivals in grisliness, but the sensitive treatment that has been accorded its theme. David Lynch in directing has pictured with deep compassion the struggle of ooe of the excluded, who by mighty fortitude and the sympa-thetic fellowship he inspires succeeds in "coming back," at least in an appreciable degree.

As the tormented elephant man,

John Hurt gives a profoundly mov-ing performance, one of high and difficult order and one complete in its success. There is a lovely bit by Anne Bancroft as Mrs. Kendall and Anthony Hopkins as the helpful doctor, Jnhn Gielgud as the bospital's spokesman and Wendy Hiller as a bad-tempered ourse finally touched by her patient's plight contribute commendable characterizations, each personal-ized to achieve an authentic ring. The photography is black and white, with documentary effect. (At the Concorde-Marigan, the Hautefeuille and the Quartier Latin in English.)

"Rough Cut" is a crook comedy with Burt Reynolds as an interna-tional jewel thief, nperating mostly in England at the moment, and with Lesley-Anne Down as his lady love and David Niven as a Yard inspector about to retire who would like to escape from his nag-

Directed by Don Siegel, it is quick moving and has amusing, carefree bounce. It is more at bome in dizzy chases than in the drawing room or stately-mansion parties, for its criminals have not y quarters of the witty lines and polished style of the bijoux burglars of Lubitsch's "Trouble in Paradise" and "Desire" Of course Nicety and presence always lights up scenes, has the Mayfair manner, but then he is unt a thief — or is be on this occasinn? (At the Ermitage and the Paramount Odcon in English.)

> Claudia Weill, who made that original, provocative film about the young women of Greenwich Village, "Girl Friends," has gone rather conventional in "It's My Turn." During its course Jill Clayburgh, as a professor of higher mathematics, capers about, unable to make up her mind about her future nr her lovers. At noe pnint she remarks that Freud pointed out that every romance concerns at least four people. The romances encountered here include whole families. Her principal bean is Michael Douglas as a damaged base-ball player whose marriage was not made in heaven. They enter into lengthy discussions on the matter but, like the film, fail to come to discernible conclusions. Miss Clayburgh is an entertaining comedienne and Douglas, son of Kirk, has inherited his father's features (edged with black whiskers) and his father's histrionic technique. ## The Elixir of Bergonzi

By Henry Pleasants International Herald Tribune

ONDON - Carlo Bergonzi has been celebrating the 30th anniver-L sary of his career as a tenor (he began as a baritone in 1948) with a song recital at the Royal Opera House and appearances there as an overage-in-grade but nonetheless delightful Nemorino in Donizetti's "L'Elisir d'Amore."

By noteworthy coincidence he was preceded in the Nemormo role two months ago by Nicolai Gedda, just one year his junior, almost to the day, and also celebrating 30 years on the opera stage — a reminder of how rich these past three decades have been in tenors of the very first-

Of the same age as Bergonzi and Gedda, give or take a year or so, are Jon Vickers and Alfredo Kraus, both still pursuing distinguished careers.

A generation that has heard Richard Tucker, Ginseppe di Stefano and Franco Corelli, and which may still rejoice in the younger voices of Placido Domingo, Luciano Pavarotti and Jose Carreras cannot complainof vocal decline as far as tenors are concerned, however much there may have been a falling off in other categories.

What sets Bergonzi apart from his tenor contemporaries and colleagues is not so much a matter of voice as of style. Of them all he isconspicuously the most old-fashioned. Not only the lovingly and linger-ingly caressed melodic line, but also the excesses of aspiration, the end-lessly extended high notes and cadences and the semaphoric gesticula-tion harking back to the affectionately remembered indulgences of Gigli and Lauri-Volpi.

More than his illustrious predecessors, however, Bergonzi does tastefully things now thought in many quarters to be tasteless. It is a matter of stylistic authenticity and consistency, a profound identification with vocal idiom and tradition, however outmoded they may seem, especially to younger listeners unfamiliar with the nider performance conventions of Italian constraints. of Italian opera Bergonzi's first Nemorino Monday was to a matinee audience of school children who can have had little notion of who he was or what he was about. But by the time be came to "Una furtive lagrime" they had begun to learn. The recital, a week ago, was to a packed house of the initiated who knew very well what was afoot and to whom there was no stylistic incongruity in juxtaposing Cacrini (1545-1615) and Buzzi-Peccia (1854-1943). There was none. Both were pure — and treasurable — Ber-

SEC Probes Insider Trading in St. Joe Bid

By Robert E. Dallos Los Angeles Times Service

NEW YORK - In what is developing into one of the biggest investigations of insider trading in more than a decade, the Securities and Exchange Commission has begun poring over the records of last month's trading in the stock of St. Joe Minerals Corp. in the days just prior to a $2 billioo takeover bid by Joseph E. Seggram & Sons.

Twenty lawyers and investiga-tors, ooe-fourth of the enforcement arm in the SEC's office bere, are analyzing the trading records at more than 40 of the nation's major brokerage houses. They are studying the period beginning March 9 up to "a few days after" the formal announcement of the offer was made March 11. ent ample opportunity for illegal insider trading. For one thing, many people - ranging from investment advisers to printers of proxy material — are involved in a takeover before it is announced. Those who take advantage of such situations know well that an acquiring company will pay a premium, possibly as high as 25 percent, for the stock of the acquired firm. That means there is a lot of mooey to be made before the investing public gets what is supposed to be secret information.

"Let's assume for a moment that there was a leak," a source said. "I think those people are coocerned that we are going to get to the bottom of this. They know, indeed that we are making a very strong effort in this case."

The SEC already has gone into federal court bere and successfully frozen the assets of three accounts at Irving Trust Co. belonging to a Swiss bank in Lugano. Banca Della Svizzera Italiana. The agency says the Swiss bank profited from inside informadoo in Seagram's bid to take over St. Joc, the largest U.S. producer of lead and zinc.

In its complaint, the SEC charged that the Lugano bank and "certain purchasers of all options for the common stock of St. Joe Minerals" had realized profits

Under that deal, Fluor would purchase 45 percent of St. Joe at $60 a share in a tender offer that started Monday and ends May 10. In the second step, Fluor would acquire the rest of St. Joe's stock by swapping 1.2 of its shares for each St. Joe share. Some observers are speculating that Seagram may make a higher offer this week.

Looking at Geography

The SEC investigators have just begun to analyze the records which the broker-dealers have sent in on so-called "blue trading quescioonaires." Once all the transactions bave been received, the SEC will be looking for several types of patterns. A primary one, a source said, is the geographical concentratioo of large trades.

"If a large number of call options were purchased by someone in Oshkosh, Wisconsin," a source said, "we'd want to get in touch with the person in Oshkosh who made those purchases. It would be sort of a whacky amount coming from one place like that."

The SEC has the ability to determine the owners of stock that is held in "street oames." such as that held by a brokerage house for an iodividual.

Besides geographical location, the SEC task force is also looking at the size of the trades, with any unusually large transacooo considered suspect. Another factor for which the agency will be on the lookout are connections that individuals who traded during the "cridcal days" had with St. Joe or with any other kinds of firms such as law firms and printing companies — that might bave been involved in arranging the takeover.

Sea-Mining Groups Back Reagan Policy

By Agis Salpukas New York Times Service

NEW YORK - The major industrial consortia poised to begin mining strategic minerals from the world's oceans see President Reagan's recent decision to review the draft treaty on the Law of the Sea, rather than immediately ratifying it, as a major victory.

But the mining groups conceded that the decision, which opens the door to renegotiation of provisions could mean that no accord would be reached.

Negotiations began in 1973. Without a treaty, industry officials said, it was unlikely that any commining because of the prohibitive costs and the potential for conflicting claims to the minerals.

Most industry leaders said they welcomed a chance to make substantive changes in the draft proposal to protect their investme These officials estimate the capital investment and technological development costs of each mining operation at more than $1 billion. The companies are seeking to harvest rich nodules of manganese, cobalt, nickel and other strategic minerals.

Marne Dubs, director of technology of Kennecott Corp., who has fought against certain provisions in the proposed treaty, said the current draft would "throttle" deep-sea mining. "Changes are en-tirely possible," he added.

Conrad Welling senior vice president of Ocean Minerals Co., one of the mining consortia, said he had met with officers of Bank of America and Chase Manhattan Bank and explained to them the provisions of the treaty. "It's not bankable," be said in an interview, after emerging from a meeting with other executives who had gathered in Kennecott's offic-es to discuss it.

The features that trouble the nining companies include:

• Production limits intended to protect land-based mineral producers such as Canada, Zaire, Zambia and Chile.

· A lack of guarantees that claims would be approved and li-censes to mine a claim would be issued to groups that made the

Another problem is the oced to deal with the Western nations, the Communist bloc and the Third World countries - all of which want a share of the sea resources. which they all agree are "the com-mon heritage of mankind."

Paul Peters, the international law administrator for the Royal Dutch-Shell Group, which is a partner in Ocean Minerals Co. said that not everybody in the industry was happy with the Reagan decision. He said Royal Dutch-Shell believed there were provisions of the draft version that should be improved, but felt that "it is probably the hest that can be achieved." He added that "our company would not go ahead with the buge investment without an international decision." Other members of the consortia include Amoco Minerals, a unit of Standard Oil of Indians: Royal Bos Kalis, a Dutch engineering company, and Lockheed Corp.

Tommy T.B. Koh of Singapore, the new president of the Law of the Sea Conference, was pessimistic about the prospect of renegotiating the treaty proposal. "To de-mand major changes at this point would be impossible to accommodate," he said.
"We regard the draft as the best compromise we can live with," be added. "We have achieved a pre-canous balance." He said that asking for major changes could lead to the balance collapsing.

BRINGING IMAGINATION TO THE BUSINESS OF ENERGY. When we built oor first LP-gas pipeline in 1960 When we built oor first LP-gas pipeline in 1960. people thought we were crazy.

Well, we've been crazy enough to grow handsomely in sales and revenues, profits and dividends, every year since that first pipeline was built.

Today, we're a uniquely balanced energy company. Our various divisions produce and market coal, LP-gas, oil, gas and liquid fertilizers. And yes, we continue to expand and operate our pipelines.

In the next few years, we think it will take a certain kind of company to make it in the energy business. It will take more than oil wells, coal mines, or even 7.816 miles of pipeline.

It will take imagination.

elfîm Says Pressure rom Banks Ebbing

MADRID - Brazil has no need seek funds from the Internation-Monetary Fund and the couny's economic performance in the eved pressure from international anks for an agreement with the MF, Planning Minister Antonio elfim Netto said Tuesday.

Mr. Delfim, attending the annumeting of the Inter-American evelopment Bank, said in an inview that Brazil has raised $4.4 illion in the first quarter this year, which $1.6 billion is in the form f medium-term Eurocredits.

Also attending the meeting was lepico's director of external fiancing, Jose Angel Gurria, who ild his country plans to raise $1 illion on the international capital wrkets this year through fixed-inrest rate instruments as a first up towards reshaping the couny's foreign-debt profile.

Brazil's first-quarter performnce, particularly in its external fiancing has been a major factor in he banking community's change f mood toward Brazil, Mr. Delm said. Brazil is expected to seek p to $15 billion in financing this

Reserves Used in '80

The $4.4 billion first-quarter inding is in contrast to what senw hankers here described as a painfully slow start" last year hen Brazil raised just $290 milon in the first quarter. Bankers said although this mved to be one-twentieth of what razil finally managed to raise, eavy drawing down of reserves in 980 as a partial substitute for inmational borrowing caused con-em among banks and increased ressure on Brazil to seek funds om the IMF.

Mr. Delim said Brazil does not itend to draw down reserves this car and expects they will remain table around current levels of 6.58 billion. This compares with 8.82 billion in January 1980 and 6.91 billion in December 1980, enical bank figures show.

The more favorable attimde of anks towards Brazil this year hould also permit a lowering of pargins on medium-term Eurorodits, which are currently at a ecord high of 2% points above the ondon interbank offered rates or 2 percent above the U.S. prime rate, he said.

Although recent banking studies in London have shown raising onds, pegged to the U.S. prime sete can turn out to be more expensive for borrowers, despite the differential below Libor margins, Mr. Delfim said he believed the cost of borrowing over prime would not in the long term result n any significant increase in debt

Mr. Delfim said he hoped a rend towards lower borrowing nargins can be accelerated by fa-torable trade results in the first two months of 1981.

The trade deficit dropped to 260 million in February from a leficit of $891 million in February 1980. He expressed confidence that Brazil can meet its target of producing a balanced trade posiion by the end of 1981.

The current-account deficit is expected to decrease slightly to beween $10-to-$12 billion this year after $12.1 billion in 1980, he add-

. Mr. Gurria said Mexico pians to aradnally restructure its foreign debt, which is 75 percent in the form of floating-rate instruments and 25 percent in fixed-rate instru-

This change in emphasis is illustrated by Mexico's decision to file a "shelf registration" with the Securities and Exchange Commis-sion earlier this year, he said. This is a step toward issuing $500 million in "Yankee bonds" in the United States during 1981, the first such undertaking since 1977.

He said Mexico's gross external first and this year will be in financing needs this year will be in the region of $12.5 billion in the public sector, of which $5 billion will represent fresh cash against $4.1 billion last year. In addition to the $1 billion

Mexico is planning to raise in fixed-rate instruments, it will also raise around $6 billion in mediumterm Eurocredits, he said.

Argentina's economy minister, Lorenza Sigant, said his country's 23-percent devaluation of the peso should enable a reduction in the 1981 current-account deficit to around $3 billion. Last year's cur-rent-account deficit was $4.85 bil-lion, against $193 million in 1979.

U.S. Auto Plan: Who Benefits?

By Perer Behr

WASHINGTON - The U.S. anto industry has protested for years that although its cars and trucks were being made in Detroit, they were being designed increasingly by Washington buancrats.

The Reagan administration made plain Monday that it means to stop that process by eliminating or relaxing 34 major safety and environmental regulations affecting cars and trucks and by insisting that in the future the "benefits" of automotive regulation clearly exceed the "costs."

The industry, eager for good news after $4.3 billion in losses last year, was pleased. Roger B. Smith, chairman of General Motors, said the proposed changes are "a sensible step toward making regulations more cost-effective." Ford called them very encouraging."

But a clear picture of how the costs and benefits of the deregulation moves will fall on the industry, on autoworkers and consumers will be hard to develop.

The regulatory changes announced Monday would save U.S. automakers $1.4 billion over the next five years through reductions in pollution controls on auto plants and delays and elimination of proposed new safety features on cars and trucks, according to the industry's estimates. Vice President George Bush, who announced the changes, said consumers' savings would be even greater — as much as $9.3 billion — through the greater — as much as $9.3 billion — inrough the elimination of new emission controls and safety

But the vice president's prediction is true only if the companies pass on to consumers all of the savings they will enjoy from the regulatory relief, and that is not at all certain, industry officials say. By giving the industry a one-year delay in in-stalling automatic seet below. stalling automatic seat belts in full-sized 1982 models, the administration is "saving" the industry between $50 and $100 a car. The administrabuild lighter-weight bumpers rather than the kind currently required, which must withstand a 5-mile-an-hour collision. A 2½-mpb standard is sufficient, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said. According to the industry, this change could reduce costs by at least $50 a car.

Will the companies trim that much from prices f cars? Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told reporters Monday that auto company executives have assured him that any benefits from the regulatory changes will be passed to consumers.

But history suggests that will not happen if the companies can help it. They need the money, too.
General Motors, for example, says that despite a series of price increases on its 1981-models, prica series of price increases on its 1981-models, prices are not yet high enough to permit it to recover all its costs. If it can, GM is likely to try to hold on to any savings from regulatory relief to help raise the $40 billion it wants to spend to modernize plants and products by 1985.

The deregulatory moves do not offer much immediate help to the 200,000 autoworkers who are still on long-term layoff. Their immediate future remains bleak until the onset of another sustained car-buying boom, strong enough to boost sales car-buying boom, strong enough to boost sales from last year's 9-million-units to the 12-million-unit level of 1978.

The impact of the regulatory changes on the environment is particularly hard to pin down.

The thrust of the administration's program is away from close monitoring of automotive emissions and audits of companies' production pro-cesses to see that current pollution standards are being met on both new cars and cars in use. When the debate on rewriting the Clean Air Act begins later this year, the standards themselves will come under sharp questioning from the administration.

Mr. Lewis, chairman of the administration's auto industry task force, claimed the steps announced Monday would have only a negligible effect on clean air and safety.

Japanese Unmoved by Reagan Auto Plan

By William Chapman Washington Post Service

TOKYO - Japanese officials reacted cooly Tuesday to President Reagan's auto industry revival plan, contending that it lacked substantive measures that would make it easier for Japan to restrict its U.S. car exports.

"My impression is that it was not comprehensive, that it did not cover all the aspects," one highranking official said.

The Minister of International Trade and Industry, Rokusuke Tanaka, contended publicly that the program would make it difficult to induce Japan's auto industry to restrict exports.

Although most officials were restrained in their public comments, several said privately that they were disappointed that Mr. Reagan had not included some tax incentives to increase auto indus-try investment and had not urged a policy of wage restraint on unions. Mr. Reagan's long-awaited polistatement, issued Monday in Washington, dealt primarily with lifting or delaying a number of reg-ulations which the industry had complained made U.S. autos costly and less competitive.

It did little to change the delicate political equation in Tokyo where a divided government is attempting to convince Japan's auto industry to cut back car exports to the United States.

posed to restraints, arguing that in time a revived U.S. industry will start selling more competitive cars. Japanese industry and some government officials fear that any move to restrain exports to the United States artificially will pro-voke demands for corresponding restrictions on exports of automobiles and other products to the European market. The reality of that fear was underscored by the visit here of the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Carrington, who disclosed Tuesday that he had warned the Japanese not to settle with the United States on export restraints without including Europe.

He said in a television interview that he told his Japanese hosts that "it is not acceptable that the American problem be solved and cials Tuesday began a series of briefings to explain in detail to Japanese officials the causes of the U.S. industry's problems. The team is headed by Stepben Lande, assistant special trade representative, and includes officials of several agencies involved in the administration's industry task force. A member of the group, Steve Saunders, an assistant trade representative, emphasized that the team is not here to negotiate an import restraint agreement. He said the U.S. representatives had come only at the request of Japanese officials and would merely present factual material regarding the industry's crisis. That is in keeping with the pub-lic assertion by the Reagan administration that it is not abandoning its free-trade principles to strike private deal with Japan on autos. Japanese officials respond to that by saying they bave little choice ally or face a congressional quota bill which Mr. Reagan has told them he would not block.

Japan's auto industry spokesmen also took a dim view of the Reagan package. The chairman of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association, Takashi Ishihara, said Tuesday he expects more effort by the U.S. auto man-agement and labor to solve the

Petro-Lewis Ties Bond To Oil Price

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8, 1981

LONDON — Petro-Lewis Corpa Denver-based oil and gas exploration company, is issuing $30 million of oil-indexed notes in the Eurobond market, lead manager Blyth Eastman Paine Webber said

The live-year notes will be sold at par bearing an annual coupon of 7½-to-8 percent. To compensate for this relatively low coupon, an additional payment will be made, at maturity, corresponding to the increase, up in a maximum of $68 per barrel, in the price of crude oil from the current $36.16 per barrel.

There is no prepayment at the issuers' option in the event of U.S. imposition of crude oil price controls. But under such circumstances the maximum return to holders would be $2,500 per $1,000

The bank had set on interest rate margin between deposits and cred-its of 3 percent, compared with 2.59 in 1980, but this had not been achieved because the central bank's measures increased refi-

THE STOCK MARKET U.S. equities are preparing There are two methods of investing in U.S. stock markets; one more rewarding than the other. By the outright purchase method, 100 shares valued at U.S. $50 per share, cost total U.S. $5,000, plus brokerage commission. For the same capital outlay you can control 2000 shares of the same stock, AND receive substantial quarterly brokerage commission reimbursements. Thus when the stock rises $1, your profit is U.S.$2,000 rather than U.S.$100, by the outright purchase method, a U.S.$10 rise on 2000 shares means a profit of U.S.$20,000, whereas a U.S.$10 rise on 100 shares means a profit of O.Y.Y U.S.$1,000.
All client funds are half-interest.

Australian Town Left in Disarray By Invasion of Hungry Kangaroos

SYDNEY - Kangaroos that invaded the town of Cobar during its recent drought have moved on - leaving a trail of ruined lawns and smashed automobile bumpers.

The Cobar shire president, Bruce Milchell, said Monday that the kangaroos left town during the weekend, when rain started falling. He said that he hoped they would stay away.

"There wasn't anything for them to eat in the countryside" Mr. Mitchell said. "They virtually wiped out most people's gardens and all the grass on our sports ovals. There must have been at least two dozen automobiles damaged in town with kangaroos suddenly jumping out in

TAR BABY By Toni Morrison. Knopf. 306 pp. $11.95. Reviewed by Anatole Broyard .

Circle Award for Fiction. "Tar Baby," her new novel, which is set on a Caribbean island, opens with an exchange between Sydney, a black butler, and Valerian, a retired candy manufacturer who is white. They talk about heat and hydrangeas. Sydney says that Valerian has corns and Valerian insists that they are bunions. Valerian observes that the croissants made by Ondine, Sydney's wife, are too flaky. They argue about the relative medis of shoes and huaraches. Valerian's wife, Margaret, enters and backers with him about food and calories.

We learn that Margaret has "blue-if-it's-a-boy" blue eyes. She wonders whether her 30-year-old son Michael will show up for Christmas. We are told that she "enjoys her son as an individual." It is Valerian's habit to sit in a greenhouse all day listening to classical music. "He built the greenhouse as a place of controlled ever-flowering life to great death in."

A young black man called Son is discovered hiding in Margaret's bed-room closer. He is a fugitive from the law who has jumped ship, who is wanted in the United States for killing his wife. Morrison tells us that, during his travels. Son "had been seeing the United States through the international edition of Time, by way of short-wave radio and the views of other crewmen. It seemed sticky. Loud, red and sticky. Its fields spongy, its pave-ments slick with the blood of all the

She becomes interested in Son and resents the fact that he was found in Margarer's closet "He doesn't want you, Margaret," Jadine says to herself. "He wants me. He's crazy and beautiful and black and poor and beautiful and he killed a woman but he doesn't want you. He wants me and I have the fingerprints

When Son plays the piano for Jad-ine, Morrison tells us that "he did not know that all the time he tinkled the keys she was holding tight to the reins of dark dogs with silver feet." Jadine doesn't know that, while she is sleeping. Son steals into her room and presses his dreams of ice bouses into

Later on in "Tar Baby," Son and Jadine go to the United States and we read that "the black girls in New York City were crying and their men were looking neither to the right nor to the

Miro Sculpture Finally Going Up In Chicago Site

CHICAGO - Behind a large curtain across the street from Pablo Picasso's abstract figure of a woman stands a 20-foot-tall sculpture of ceramic tile and a plaster-like material awaiting a crane to lower its bronze head and tiara into place.

Called "Miro's Chicago," it is to be dedicated by Mayor Jane Byrne on April 20, the 88th birthday of its crestor, the Spanish artist Joan Miro. "Eventually people will get a feeling for it," said Juan Artigas, 42, an associate of Miro, who expects the public to be confused by the work at first. The $500,000 sculpture will be 35 Icet tall when finally assembled. Miro started plans to bring his largest sculpture to Chicago several years before the 1967 unveiling of Picasso's work. Lack of money stalled the project until fall, when the city put up $250,000 and private donors the rest. The architectural firm Skidmore.

Owings and Merrill designed the plans to put up the statue and work-men donated their time to erect the abstract figure's bottom half. Public reaction probably will be similar to that after the unveiling of the Picasso, said Rimatas Griskelis, a Skidmore partner. "It happened with Picasso. It grew on people. And now it is part of the city. In two or three years people will get to know it," he said.

"What does it mean?" Jadine ask Son as they go up to bed. "It means, Son says, "that white folks and blac folks should not sit down and eat to gether." Some readers may ask wha "Tar Baby" means. They may fee that black folks should sit down wit white folks for a first sychology white folks for a frank exchang about the reading and writing of fit tion. He may question thus unqualified fields that are spongy au-those pavements that are slick with the blood of the best people. WHEN a slam is in prospect, there have long been two schools of thought. One school calls for scientific exploration, exchanging information in the hope of reaching an accurate contract. The second school believes in bashing, jumping directly to slam when it appears that the overall strength is adequate.

The bashers hope that they will attract a favorable opening lead since the opening leader will have limited information. Sometimes a basher can be confident that the opening lead will be favorable, as shown in the diagramed deal from a rubber bridge

In the last month, the Phils have tried desperately to set up a threecornered deal that would get rid of grumpy Greg Luzinski and young Walk (whose value is at its highest now) and bring them outfielder Gary Matthews and one of the Chicago White Sox' capable young left-handed starters.

Montreal has never proved it is clutch team. In their own park last October, oceding to win two of three from the Phillies to become East champs, the Expos gave as pure a clinic in choke-ball as could be imagined. They'll have a hard time forgetting their five errors in one game, their amazingly stupid base running and a total absence of chips-down hitting.

The Expos will have to prove that the corrosive clubbouse influences of Roo LeFlore (a one-year, here-and-gone nightmare), the meagainst-the-world Rodney Scott and Ellis Valentine have oot soured the club's competitive edge.

The key player for the Expos may be the vastly talented Valentine (67 runs batted in in 311 atbats) who was out with injuries the secood half of the year. "I just don't think he wants to play," said pitcher Bill Lee. "He seems afraid of failure." Valentine has complained this spring that he wouldn't mind a trade because his own teammates tease him, nooe too gently. Wonder why? Pitching cures many ills, and the

The Dodgers are the perfect example of a team with absolutely consistent year-to-year hitting, which has its place in the standings determined by the changing state of its pitching staff.

In the last four years, L.A. has his 109 more homers than any other team in the league. While the Steve Garvey-Roo Cey-Reggie Smith gang has been uniform, L.A. pitchers have been a trip — Doug Rau, 15-9 to 1-5 and Rick Sutcliffe, 17-10 to 3-9 being typical of almost a dozen migraine-inducing Dodger hurlers.

second in ERA and were second in the division. And once, in 79, they slipped to seventh in ERA, were supped to seventh in E.R.A. were eighth in the league in wins, finishing below .500. Any questions?

After losing both Tommy John and Sutton, L.A. ought to be sliding, but the team with the league's best history of producing years. best history of producing young arms has three more classy prod-ucis arriving — Steve Howe, Joe Beckwith and Valenzuela. Two cooteoding franchises whose histories may intersect this year are the traditionally built Reds, strong in fundamentals, and the store-bought Braves, constructed on grotesquely overpriced free

The best inside evaluation of the Reds comes from Johnny Bench, who has adamantly refused to play more than two games a week behind the plate. If Bench thought the Reds had an honest shot at another Series visit, do you really think the best catcher io history — and perhaps gutsiest — wouldn't squat for ooe more year? Bench senses the true state of affairs and he's putting

With Bench at any other positioo the Reds have oo chance, since his catching replacements are all weak hitters and the mediocre staff needs all of Bench's pitch-calling savvy.

The Braves have fine young sluggers in Bob Horner and Dale Murphy, but the gentleman who holds the purse strings and med-dles in the baseball judgments, Ted Turner, has the heathen lack of sensibility one might expect in basehall's most irresponsible owner. He can spot a hitter (anybody can), but on pitchers, Turner might as well consult a psychic. The Braves' aces are Phil Niekro and that infernal cheat Gaylord Perry, both of whom are 42 and are coming off losing seasons.

The good-oews team of the National League may be the San Diego Padres who, after years of losing with big free-agent names, may now play respectably with an anooymous cast collected by General Manager Jack McKeoo and managed by Frank Howard.

Ratio Rationale

Perhaps the clearest proof of the relative importance of hitting and pitching in baseball crystal-gazing the case of Dave Kingman, the player who in recent years has had the best ratio of home runs to atbats of any player in the game.

"He's proved himself," Smith difference in the playoffs is the pressure. But if you're up three games in a series, there wouldn't be that much pressure, and he could play his style."

Man With the Answers

But suppose the Islanders are Jerry Buss. not up three games? Suppose they lose Smith, and they're down a game or two or three? If those questions develop, only Melanson can answer them.

Since rejoining the Islanders fol-lowing the Resch trade, Melanson has been the goaltender in four victories, against only one loss.

But wisely, to avoid the possibil-ity of some Islander fans' booing him in their annovance over the departure of the popular Resch, Coach Al Arbour did oot use the rookie at home until last Satur-day's 4-1 triumph over Washing-ton, a victory that clinched first place over all and inspired a chant of "Roll-ee, Roll-ee" by fans.

If form holds up in the playoff matchups, the Islanders will have to get by Toronto, Boston, Los Angeles and St. Louis in order to win

Form, of course, seldom holds up completely, although the playoffs usually enable teams to ploy bockey instead of the roller derby on ice that John Ziegler, the NHL president, and many of the league's owners condone during the regular season.

Oddly, what chance the Rangers says. "Let me tell you, he's there, had of ambushing the Los Angeles II we got up three games, there'd Kings probably was dissolved by be no problem putting him in. The the surprising elimination of the difference in the playoffs is the pressure. But if you're up three Lakers by the Houston Rockets in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Lakers' loss has surely put the Kings on alert, especially since both teams have the same owner,

Mirage

If the Rangers were to stun the Kiogs in their opening series, an Islander-Rangers series might occur in the second round. But for the Rangers a successful playoff series or two would be more of a mirage than a miracle, just as it mirage than a miracle, just as it was two years ago, when they went to the Stanley Cup final before losing to the Canadiens in five games.

A good performance by the Rangers in the playoffs might fool the Madison Square Garden brass into believing that the team is not so had after all despite an underso bad after all despite an under-. 500 record.

In reality, the Rangers need

The Golden Fleecing

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Our large research staff is being flogged in the cellar at this very moment. This is oot the semiannual horsewhipping which we administer routinely to keep them oo their toes but an impromptu beating with lead-weighted knouts such as we occasionally conduct when our research staff bites the hand that feeds them. This time they tried to bring disgrace on this column by supplyformatioo recently when we asked them to root

Baker around in Bulfunch, find out who filched the Golden Fleece. Their answer, which they cast in print and published after we had left the premises was Perseus.

As hordes of literate subscribers (four) have noted in gloating let-ters, it was oot Perseus who filched the Fleece. It was Jason.

We immediately docked our large research staff a week's pay and ordered supplementary corporal punishmeni. Lest anyone accuse us of ahusing our work force to cooceal our own ignorance of the Goldeo Fleece affair, we offer to send, upon formal request hy authorized persons, photostatic copies of our high-school test papers in Latin and Greek.

These will provide irrefutable documentary proof that we knew as early as 1922 the distinction not only between Perseus and Jason. but also between Medea and Judith Anderson.

In fact, our request for the re-search staff to look into the Golden Fleece affair and provide the Fleece-filcher's oame was prompted hy 100 much knowledge, rather than too little. Having delved into the matter years ago, we happened to know that Perseus did once toy with the idea of filching the Fleece for himself. In the heat of journalistic composition, we had forgot-ten whether he got to it ahead of Jason and oeeded the research staff only to refresh our memory.

The facts of the matter are rather amusing. At one time Jason, Perseus, Agamemnon and Aesop were all of a mind to go after the Fleece, which was really nothing more than the hide of a golden ram, or as Zeus called it. "a sheepskin." Zeus seems to have been an early-day Lyndon Johnson. From time to time he appeared suddenly before mythical Creeks to deliver hawling hortatory speeches concluding with, "And don't come hack without the sheepskin oo the wall." Oo one occasion, having turned himself into a shower of golden coins, the better to sneak ioto Mrs. Aesop's bedroom. Zeus clinked down from the heavens into the Aesopian boudoir and found himself in an awkward situation. Mrs. Aesop was out. Iostead, Aesop was there telling Jason, Perseus and Agamemnon a bedtime fable.

To cover his emharrassment. Zeus delivered his usual speech -'And don't come back without that sheepskin oo the wall" -turned himself into a ski lift and went back to the top of Mouot Olympus.

The story comes back to you now, doesn't it? How Madame Zeus, who wanted to get on with the Trojan War. told Agamemnon that Zeus was all hluster and oo bite and warned that if he did not start the war before taking off on a wild sheepskio chase he would have her to deal with. How Aesop delayed entering the Fleece hunt hecause he could not think of a moral with which to end his Fahle of the Elephant and the

The short and loog of it was that Perseus lost interest in the Fleece once Cassandra cautioned him it had oot been tanned and predicted that it would cause him to break out in allergic hives. Without competition, the Fleece-filching was a piece of cake for Jason.

Fortunately for Greece, Perseus chopped off Medusa's snake-infested head oo his way home and used it to hite Achilles in the heel. thus ridding Greece of a blustering, muscle-bound ouisance. The result, of course, was Socrates.

(Note to large research staff: Am leaving early in order to get in an extra preprandial martini tonight. Check to make sure the result really was Socrates and not Pepin the Short or Abner Doubleday. Any monkey business with the copy will be severely dealt with.)

OS ANGELES — It should be called Marta's Mouotain -she has walked its fire roads so many times. Every morning 90year-old Marta Feuchtwanger climbs the hill behind her Pacific Palisades home with the city on her right, the sea on her left.

"On a good day," Marta Feuchtwanger says. "I make three peaks." Her legs are as will-ing as when she hiked through Europe on her honeymoon, or the time she traversed the Pyrenees on foot, fleeing a conceotration camp.

But eventually her black Chinese robes begin to feel heavy and she turns around - back to the castle she calls home and the work of managing the estate of her late husband, celebrated German novelist Lion Feucht-

In 1940, Los Angeles hecame a center of the German cultural emigratioo wheo a number of in-tellectuals and artists settled or visited here after escaping the Nazi regime. Thomas Mann. Kun Weill, Arnold Schoenberg. Albert Einstein and Bertolt Brecht were among those who found solace on the Feuchtwangers' hill, watching the sun set and remembering.

When Lawrence Weschler approached Maria Feuchtwanger in 1975, asking to interview her for the UCLA oral history archives, she declined Weschler persisted and finally she agreed. Weschler asked questions, pariently drawing out detailed recollections. Their conversations were completed and transcribed, filling 2,000 pages.

Marta Feuchtwanger has since willed her estate and library to the Feuchtwanger Institute for Exile Studies at the University of Southern California. But perhaps her most generous cootribution was detailing "An Emigre Life," as the reminiscences are called.

Stories of Famous Friends She told stories about their famous friends: Brecht, a 20-year-old medical student when they met in 1919. Lion Feuchtwanger, then a theater critic, was the first to encourage his writing and they be-came lifelong friends.

 Arnold Schoenberg, Finding himself portrayed as a diseased composer in Mann's novel, he once protested to Marta Feuchtwanger across a crowded super-market: "You have to know I have no syphilis."

There are memories of the working life she shared with her hushand, self-described as "a German novelist whose heart beat Jewish and whose mind was cosmopolitan." In another time, Marta says, she might have be-come a writer herself. As it was, they discussed his work daily.

Marta inspired changes and helped decide on themes. In another volume she tells of the summer she was 49. She escaped from a Nazi prison camp in southern France, then dis guised herself as a black marketeer to search for her husband incarcerated in another camp.

When she found him, Marta engineered his kidnapping. Feuchtwanger had acquired a false identification document, hui Marta's bore her own came. which was sure to be recognized at the customs office at the border - Feuchtwanger was among a group of individuals the Nazis were determined to keep. When her husband died in 1958, Marta let the well-kept garden return to its wild state and she took to the hills, walking for hours. She would then go for a swim in the ocean and run a mile along the shore to dry - she prefered this to the company of people.

friends, she re-entered the world and turned her attention to managing her husband's estate. She became involved with people again - especially the young stu-dents who came to her for advice. Mostly, she listened to them.

But even with the passing of years, the events of her life war, interpment and the shock of exile - have become no easier to

PEOPLE: Refugee Unit Honors AFL-CIO Chief, Wife

Since the first was given to Wes Germany's Willy Brandt in 1957 14 persons have won the Freedon Award of the International Reson. Committee, and never have two persons been honored at the same time. That will change on Thurs day when Lane kirkband, presiden. of the AFL-CiO, and his wife, he na, will receive awards at a dinn in New York. They're not being honored as husband and wife h as individuals who happen to a married," said Alton Bastner, th merried," said Alton Kastner, the land is being honored because of his long devotion to the cause of refugees both as a union leade, and as an individual Mrs. Ker land, described as "very much human rights activist" who the recently sought to mobilize support for the Polish Solidarit movement, comes by her interes in refugees naturally, Kastner said A survivor of a World War II Naz concentration camp, she was lated imprisoned in Czechoslovakia. Home magazine, her daughter him moved into a flat on Manhattan's Uppe-West Side — a trendy but not shi tist neighborhood. Caroline's apartment is described as a three bedroom triplex with library in a 100-year-old brownstone. How does Caroline pay the almost $2,000 a mouth rent? With the help of two roommates — male friends from her college days, the magazine says.

CBS News anchorman Dan Rather has dropped all charges against a Chicago cab driver, who he said kidnapped him and took him on a wild ride. Judge Richard La Clen said the state's attorney: could withdraw two misdemeanor charges against can driver Eugene Phillips. Rather was on his way to interview author Study Terkel last. November when he and the driver began arguing over the author's address. Rather said he asked to get out of the taxi and Phillips refused to let him out. Phillips, 38. was charged with "failure to discharge a passenger" and disorderly conduct. The driver accused Rather of failing to pay his $12.25 fare. Rather has denied the charge.

imported piece by piece from They dug through layers and layers of lizards and mice preserved in the foot-thick mud in the living room. After much cleaning-up, a cool, elegant retreat emerged. Today, nearly every room is lined with rare books. Lion Fenchiwanger had first assembled a library in Berlin. He built a second in France, also lost. The third, purchased with money Hollywood paid for rights to his books, was threatened by a brush fire in 1961 and saved by Marta, wielding a hose.
